CARNEGIE LAKE DRY.

Princeton Hockey Team Suffers a

Severe Drawback. Princeton, N. J., Jan. 27 .- Princeton athletics received a severe blow yesterday when it was announced that an agreement had been made with the Pennsylvania Railroad whereby the new Carnegle lake, recently donated by Andrew Carnegie, is to be drained. This is done in order that the water in the Raritan Canal, which runs parallel to the lake, may be drained without reaking the dividing bank. Princeton's hope of winning the inercollegiate hockey championship was naterially lessened by the fact that the team will lose the lake, where they have been practicing for some time, it being the only available place for the seven to work out on. The Tigers have a pretty good lead in the Interscholassuch a time, when there is a foot of ice on the lake, it is a big disappoint team. The lake will be drained until February 16.

CIGAR-SHAPED AUTO DOOMED
